Citation: Zoological Survey of India, 2024: E-NEWS, 71: 1-31

Dear Colleagues, Readers, Partners and Friends,

As we embark on a new year, I wish to convey my heartfelt gratitude, on behalf of our institution, to all individuals who support and engage with our mission. I extend my best wishes to you and your families for a joyful, prosperous, and environmentally conscious New Year 2025 ahead.

I am extremely happy to present the December 2024 edition of our monthly E-News. This publication highlights the vibrant activities of ZSI related to faunal exploration, identification, documentation, and discoveries. It also emphasizes our notable achievements in faunal inventorisation, the publication and conservation of biodiversity, as well as the unwavering dedication of our team to enhancing conservation efficiencies, strategies, and planning for the preservation of India's rich faunal resources. The past months have been particularly remarkable, characterized by significant milestones in research, conservation initiatives, and collaborative endeavors. Our teams have made noteworthy detections concerning India's unique ecosystems, and we take pride in our role in protecting the invaluable biodiversity heritage of our nation. The newsletter highlights the key aspects of these initiatives, encompassing field studies, addition of species in Indian database as well as world faunal database, and impactful outreach programs. It stands as a testament to the enthusiasm and dedication of our staff, partners, and the wider community who are tirelessly working towards the cause of conservation.

Under the Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with Natural History Museum, London, Zoological Survey of India is instrumental for the development of bilateral studies on the digitizing process of Indian fauna housed in NHM, London and scientists of ZSI are making their regular visit to accomplish the task. A recent initiative was under taken to develop strategies where LinSoc can work together with NHM and ZSI for the conservation of faunal diversity.
The GBIF-CESP-HKH project related to Enhancing institutional capacity for data management in the Hindu Kush Himalayan region under the Capacity Enhancement Support Programme funded by Global Biodiversity Information Facility (GBIF) was initiated in this month where Zoological Survey of India (ZSI) is one of the partners.

In this month, scientists and researchers at ZSI have successfully identified a total of 1402 species of faunal communities covering diverse ecosystems of India. This achievement includes the identification of six new species, which consist of one new Scolopendromorpha species, one new Frog species, one species of Hymenoptera, and three new Lepidoptera species. It is particularly noteworthy that one diptera species, one hymenoptera species, and one polychaeta species have been newly recorded in India.

I wish to extend my sincere congratulations to all those who contributed to this publication for their meticulous work in assembling and articulating our findings with accuracy and clarity. Their dedication ensures that India's unique and invaluable wildlife, especially regarding faunal communities, continues to advance in conservation initiatives. Let us unite in our commitment to preserving the natural heritage of our nation. As we navigate the opportunities and challenges of 2025, let us renew our pledge to protect and honor the natural world. May this year draw us nearer to our common goal of a sustainable future, enhanced by the remarkable biodiversity we cherish.

Jai Hind,
Dr. Dhriti Banerjee
